Abstract
Commitment in Poetry in the Early Islamic Period

Fares Hatrash Mohammad Al Hashish

Mu'tah University, 2006

The thesis studies the issue of commitment in poetry in the early Islamic period. The study falls into five chapters. Chapter I discusses the attitude of the Holy Quran towards poets and poetry, and concludes that the Holy Quran does not undermine the value of poetry in the society or belittler the roles of poets; rather it classifies poets into two group: the misguided and the believers.

Chapter II discusses the Prophet's (PBUH) attitude towards poets and poetry. The Chapter makes it clear that The Prophet's attitude harmonizes with that of the Holy Quran in that he made the believer poets his companions and exalts them to write poetry in defense of Islam, and asked Muslims to recite Jahili poetry that encourages high moral values.

Chapter II discusses the attitude of the Rashidi Caliphs towards poets and poetry. The chapter shows that though the Caliphs had different attitudes towards the issue, these various attitudes were within the frame permitted by the Holy Quran and the prophet's Tradition.

Chapter IV discusses the new Islamic values used by poets and instilled into their poetry. Chapter V tackles the issue of the "weakness" of poetry in the early Islamic period from the perspectives of various critics and scholars.
